Care instructions

We recommend vacuum cleaning of your rug at least once a week to maximise its life-span. Do not use vacuum cleaning with brushes, as it will damage your rug.

A new rug sheds fibres. This does not affect the quality of the rug in any way. However, while most rugs stop shedding after a while, rugs made with bamboo will reduce the amount they shed but will not cease shedding completely. This is because of the specific properties of bamboo fibres.

Loose yarns will occur in hand woven rugs. Please do not pull the yarns out but carefully cut with a pair of scissors.

Ideally, the humidity in the room where the rug is located should be around 50%. If the humidity is less than 40%, the yarns will become dry and brittle and therefore more fragile; if humidity falls to this level or below, you need to spray the rug with water.

The rug should be rotated every so often to prevent wear in the same place. Repeated friction on the same spot can alter the structure of the rug. Rotation of the rug will also prevent even light from permanently affecting its appearance.

If you place the rug on new wooden floors, it is imperative that the floors are completely dry. If not, it is highly likely the moisture will create mould on the floor, underneath the rug or change the floor colouring. Please require a warranty from the manufacturer and/or supplier of the floor that it is appropriate to place the rug.

If you stain the rug, wet a clean white towel with water, wring it out and place it on the stain immediately. Leave the towel there (without lifting it to check!) until it has absorbed as much as possible. Then replace it with another clean, damp towel, which should be left in place until the stain is gone or is no longer being absorbed. Danskina cannot guarantee that this method will remove all stains. Do not rub to remove stains, especially not bamboo rugs.

Should you have any further questions about how to treat stains or soiling, or how to get the rug professionally cleaned, we recommend that you contact our Customer Service Department or the home furnishing store where you purchased the rug.

Please do not walk on or rub a wet bamboo rug as this will damage the structure of the yarn. It will take a few days for a bamboo rug to fully dry.

We recommend professional cleaning of the rug.
